

AcademyHealth Opportunities for NRHI Members

We acknowledge that things are changing daily as a result of the coronavirus (COVID-19). We will be sure to keep members updated as new information is received. – See language below for more information.

Research Community on Low-Value Care

Provided by AcademyHealth, ABIM Foundation, and Donaghue Foundation, the Research Community on Low-Value Care is a professional network for research producers and users to advance their work in eliminating low-value care in the U.S. and abroad.

Currently the community has 15 members: researchers in academic and other settings, health system representatives, patients/consumers, clinicians, health plans, and policymakers

The goals of the research community include:

- Fostering connections, communications, and collaborations among researchers and end-users with an interest in reducing low-value care
- Facilitating exchange of information on new evidence, research methods, and funding opportunities
- Identifying and spurring dialogue on shared challenges and key priorities for strengthening research, practice, and policy
- Helping to generate new collaborations to conduct research or implement research findings.
