

Alan Gilbert, GE healthymagination

Alan joined GE healthymagination in 2011 and is the director of health policy, government, and community Strategy. In his role, he leads health policy and is engaged as an activist for incubating new ideas that map the future of GE's business worldwide, through private and public collaborations and partnerships in health and healthcare. He previously held positions as health policy advisor to President George W. Bush, senior advisor to Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson, counsel in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives, and senior vice president and counsel for the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America.
