

New Position: Data and Transparency Strategist

Center for Healthcare Transparency at Network for Regional Healthcare Improvement (NRHI)

Take your expertise to a national scale.

The Center for Healthcare Transparency is looking for a new team member with significant hands-on experience analyzing and reporting healthcare performance information to a multi-stakeholder audience. The ideal candidate will have participated in developing reports and presenting claims/administrative and/or clinical data for use by employers/purchasers, patients/consumers and /or providers and have a strong commitment to accelerating transparency by making meaningful cost and quality information about healthcare providers readily and publicly available. Experience working in Regional Health Improvement Collaborative (RHIC), All Payer Claims Database (APCD) and/or Health Information Exchange (HIE) is strongly preferred. The core functions of this role are to analyze, synthesize and communicate complex technical issues around data analysis to a broad audience and to contribute to developing strategies and tactics that will enable credible performance information to be produced and publicly reported by a network of regional entities across the country within the next five years.

The Strategist will be part of a national team and work directly with Regional Health Improvement Collaboratives (RHICs) and other regional data entities across the country to document best practices and recommend processes and standards, often at a detailed technical level. He or she will help anticipate operational barriers that might be encountered in different markets, such data access, data quality, vendor limitations, etc. and will help develop solutions and alternative approaches. The Strategist will have exposure to national policy makers, leading clinicians and large corporate employers. The position requires excellent oral and written communication skills, comfort working through multiple perspectives and iterations to define the most effective strategies, finely honed organizational skills and an entrepreneurial spark. The candidate will be located at NRHI's waterfront offices in downtown Portland, Maine. Remote arrangements will be considered for the right candidate.
